AMUSEMENTS TO-NIGHT.

FORD'S THEATER .- Mr. Clarks will appear to night for the last time as one of the Dro. mios" in Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors." This play has been performed every night this week, and the large audiences in attendance have attested how agreeably they have been entertained. The drams of "Jonathan Bradford," will conclude the entertainment.

GROVER'S THEATER.- This is positively the last night of the grand opera, and Mr. Joseph Hermanns takes a benefit. The grand opera, "A night in Grenada," will be performed entire; and there will be performed also the second and third acts of " Faust," th- whole entertainment to conclude with the "Robin Adair," scene from "La Dame Blanche."

CANTERBURY .- Saturday night is always a good night to visit Canterbury, for the enterthis is the last opportunity of witnessing the graceful tight-rope performance of Mile Ma-rietta Ravel, and many acts which have been the source of pleasure the past week.

The National Democratic Association held an adjourned meeting at Parker's Hall last night, and it was called to order by the President, Chas. Mason. Esq.
Among those who joined the Association last night and signed the constitution were Gration

Powell, who was proposed by Mr. Hoover, who alluded to Mr. Powell as an old warhorse of the democracy, and who was an old and efficient member of the Democratic Jackson Association: John D. Lakeman, Thos W. Burch, Fourth Ward; Joseph A. Gill, John N. Oliver, attorney at law, late of Kentucky; Wm. H Tower: Capt. John Tyler Powell, Michael Duffy, J. Franklin Reigart, patent agent, late of Lancaster, Pa., and Capt. Jno. M. Thornton. Mr. T. B. Florence stated that there seemed to be some misapprehension with regard to the time when delegates were to be elected to Uhicago, and in order to settle the matter, he moved that Tuesday next be fixed as the time for said election. The motion prevailed. Judge Bliss, M. O. from Ohio, being in the cused himself by saying that he came there as an observer, and not as a leader, and while he would do all in his power to aid the cause and fully endorse all their proceedings, he declined making a speech at this time. Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware, who had been in the hall was now about to leave, when he was loudly cheered by those present, who demanded a speech, and in response to the demand he took the stand, and said he would not make a long speech when so noble a champion of the Democracy as Judge Bliss had refused. But he would say that all was not dark as it was a short time ago. There was a bright light room, he was called upon for a speech, but ex-shining, and above the darkness there was a gleam of the light of liberty. [Applause.] His basis for thinking so was that this party, which was so unfortunate now as to be at the head of affairs, was crumbling by its own dissensions. [Applause] A few among that party had heretofore studied the principles of political diberty rightly, but in an hour of selfishness and a desire of personal aggrandizement had led them off; but now they were alarmed, and had split off from the corrupt party, and therefore the country need not be despaired of alto-gether. [Applause.] But let us have but one watchword, and sustain that word like men and all will be well. That, watchword is Peace. [Loud applause Hon. Thomas Price, of Missouri, was then called to the stand, and he proclaimed himself an out-and-out Democrat-one who had never voted for any one but a Democrat for the Presidency, and who would never vote for the candidate of any other party. [Applause.] He hoped to meet the District of Columbia delegates at Chicago, and there would be supported a true and unconditional Democrat. [Applanse.] We have had blood enough already, and if Grant cannot speedily take Richmond tit is time for all to unite and stop this bloodshed and war. [Applause.] In conclusion the speaker congratulated the association upon the favorable auspices under which they had or-

Mr. D. J. Snow, one of the secretaries of the association, was here called to the stand. He said he was a citizen of Illinois, and had been for a number of years, and was well acquainted with the distinguished Illinoisan who now occupied the President's chair. So far as Mr. Lincoln was concerned, as a private citizen, no one could say aught but good of him; but as a statesman or a politician he (the speaker) could say Lothing less than Mr. Lincoln's most bitter enemies would say of him.

The speaker said we had not yet seen the borrors of civil war brought to our own doors, but he predicted that this would be seen if this infernal war was not speedily closed. We bave already had indications of evil, and at th s moment the minds of many representatives are agitating the question of repealing the com-mutation clause of the enrollment act. He therefore, in order to prevent this if possible, offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to prepare a m-morid to Congress protesting, on behalf of this association, against the repeal of said clause. The speaker thought this should be done as a measure of policy, because there were many men in the North who were conscientiously opposed to the pros-ceution of the war, but who would pay the samrather than break thelaw, but if compelled to fight would certainly resist. [Applause.] The speaker doubted not there were many then present who were conscientiously opposed to shedding the blood of their brethren in battle. [Applause] He (the speaker) had many near and dear friends who had failen by Northern bullets while fighting bravely upon Southern battle-fields; and he had many more friends who were bravely fighting there, and so help him God, he would never submit to be compelled to level a gun at them. [Applause.] No, he would die upon his ewn doorstep first. [Renewed applause.] He did not propose to offer a rebellious resistance unless compelled to do so, for he had suffered already on account of resisting tyranny and he found that it was useless to assert right and justice while the present party was in power. There were a cless of people in the North it was doubtful whether any oppression could arouse to resist-ance of tyranny, for by continued tyranizing the spirit of many in the North seemed broken. He (the speaker) spoke certainly for no one but himself but he believed there were thousands of people in this District who would prefer to die at their ewn doors rather than go forth and shed the blood of those with whom they had been upon the best social terms. But dire consequences would be the result if the commutation clause were repealed for armed resistance to the draft would then certainly be offered.

[Applause.]
The speaker continued in a spread eagle speech about the good feeling heretofore existing between the North and South, and about the North not being alone our country, but the North and South. No consideration of patriotism, he argued, could urge a further vigorous prosecution of the war. None could doubt that we had some sort of a government, for all had felt its iron tyranical hand upon their heads and hearts. Nor did devotion to the Union demand a continuance of the war, for it was almost apparent that the rebellion could not be suppressed by war. [Applause.] Men were not found sufficient and he had understood that an Honorable Senator had said in his seat that he would arm the women and send them for h to do battle in this good cause. Yes, arm them like amazons as did the King of Dahomey lately. [Applause] In conclusion the speaker arged the passage of his resolution as a matter of policy and of duty.

Mr. Florence said if any practical good was to be effected the resolution should be passed at once, for Congress was in the habit of so rushing things through that the repeal might be made before the memorial went in, if it was delayed. The resolution was therefore passed, but the appointment of the committee was deferred till next meeting, and the association then ad-
